

Post-doctoral researcher in the history of medieval law

The Maison des Sciences de l'Homme Ange Guépin (MSH, Nantes, France) is recruiting a post-doctoral researcher for work on the project "RELMIN: The legal status of religious minorities in the Euro-Mediterranean world (5th-16th centuries)" (www.relmin.eu).

RELMIN is based at the MSH and is directed by John Tolan, professor of history at the University of Nantes. It is funded for five years (2010-2015) as part of the Ideas programme of the European Research Council's Seventh Framework Programme.

Project summary

European religious diversity has its roots in the practice of medieval societies. Medieval European polities, Christian and Muslim, granted protected and inferior status to selected religious minorities. RELMIN collects, publishes and studies legal texts defining the status of religious minorities in pre-modern Europe. The corpus of texts includes Roman law (in particular in the legal codes of Theodosius and Justinian), canon law (acta of Church councils, the Decretum attributed to Gratian, the Decretales), national or royal law (from "barbarian" law codes of the early Middle Ages to national compilations such as the Siete Partidas of Alfonso X of Castile in the thirteenth century), urban law (particularly the fueros in the Iberian peninsula and hisba manuals in Andalusia), rabbinical responsa, and fatwa collections. The database will contain texts in their original languages and translations into English and French, as well as an annotated bibliography on the subject. This will become a major reference tool for research in the history of minority law and of interreligious relations. Candidates should consult and familiarize themselves with the pilot edition of the database:

<http://www.cn-telma.fr/relmin/index/?langue=eng>

The project also holds semi-annual workshops and is planning a major international conference on Religious diversity in pre-modern Europe. A series of comparative thematic studies on specific aspects of interreligious relations will allow us to compare responses to similar issues in diverse societies, from seventh-century Córdoba to fifteenth-century Krakow. The goal is to encourage collaborative interdisciplinary work by scholars from different countries with varying linguistic skills, to encourage new innovative research that cuts across traditional divides. The project will publish major works in the field: in particular, the proceedings of the various conferences and workshops.

Qualifications

Each candidate should have a PhD in history, law, language, religion or literature, with a specialisation related to the themes of RELMIN. She or he should have a high level of competence in several medieval languages and should have experience editing documents in at least one of those languages. We welcome applicants of all nationalities. We are particularly looking for researchers with competence in one or several of the following areas:

- Municipal law in Italian and Iberian cities
- Jewish communities of eastern and central Europe

Since the project's working languages are English and French, researchers should be conversant in both (or at least in one, with a willingness to quickly learn the second).

Responsibilities of the post-doctoral researcher

The post-doctoral researcher will be part of a research team based in Nantes. His/her primary responsibilities will be editing the project database and participating in the organization of the semi-annual workshops. The researcher will be given a specific thematic area corresponding to his/her particular expertise. In this area his/her tasks will include:

- Bibliographical research:
 - Identifying medieval legal texts to include in the database
 - Identifying important secondary scholarship in the field and providing bibliographical notices for the database
- Database management:
 - Writing and editing entries on specific medieval texts
 - Identifying specialists in the field and inviting them to contribute to the database
- Participating in regular team meetings (including periodic seminars and workshops)
- Organizing a thematic workshop in her/his area of expertise

Conditions of employment

Each of the post-doctoral researchers will be hired for one year on a contract (French CDD: contrat à durée déterminée), with a possibility of renewal for a second year. The starting date is January 1st, 2013, though it may be possible to negotiate a later or earlier starting date. The researcher will be expected to reside in Nantes for the period of employment and will be provided with office space at the MSH.

Application procedures

Applicants should send a preliminary application, consisting of a letter of interest, a curriculum vitae, and the names and addresses of three references. All documents should be sent in PDF format to: relmin@univ-nantes.fr. Examination of applications will begin on June 25th, 2012 and will continue until the position is filled.
